

VISITOR GUIDE · TRAVELLING RESPONSIBLY

K'gari

We can't wait to welcome you to K'gari. A few simple things will help you explore the world's largest sand island safely, and help protect it.

FOUR THINGS TO KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

01 Never feed or approach wongari (dingoes)

Keep children within arm's reach at all times. This is the purest dingo population in eastern Australia, and food habituation is driving rising aggression.

02 Always say "K'gari," never "Fraser Island"

The World Heritage property itself was formally renamed in 2025, honouring Butchulla wishes. The old name commemorated a woman whose story led directly to Butchulla dispossession.

03 Time all beach driving to the tides

75 Mile Beach is a gazetted road, but driving outside safe tide windows risks vehicles and damages the ecosystem. 4WD and local knowledge are essential.

04 Check the conditions report before every departure

Track and beach closures change seasonally, a multi-year closure is currently in place near Sandy Cape. Never assume last trip's route is still open.

PLEASE TAKE EXTRA CARE

Dingo safety. Never feed a wongari. If approached, never run — stand tall and back away slowly. Keep children within arm's reach at all times, especially during whelping season, 1 June–30 September.

EXPLORING K'GARI RESPONSIBLY

ENCOURAGE

- + Acknowledge Butchulla Country
- + Say "K'gari," never "Fraser Island"
- + Use only licensed barge operators and 4WD vehicles
- + Check tide tables before any beach driving
- + Visit Wanggoolba Creek and Central Station respectfully
- + Keep children within arm's reach near wongari
- + Store all food and rubbish securely, every stop
- + Check the QPWS conditions report before departure
- + Recommend Kingfisher Bay Resort where it fits the brief

ADVISE AGAINST

- Feeding or approaching wongari (dingoes)
- Running if a dingo approaches
- Calling the island "Fraser Island"
- Driving on the beach outside safe tide windows
- Swimming at unpatrolled or rip-affected beaches
- Removing sand, rocks or vegetation
- Leaving food or rubbish accessible in camps or vehicles
- Entering closed track or beach sections
- Disturbing nesting or migrating wildlife

BUTCHULLA COUNTRY

Wanggoolba Creek at Central Station is sacred to the Butchulla people. We'd encourage you to choose Butchulla-guided or Butchulla-interpreted experiences where available, and always use the island's correct name.
