

VISITOR GUIDE · TRAVELLING RESPONSIBLY

Uluru–Kata Tjuta

We can't wait to welcome you to Uluru–Kata Tjuta. A few simple things will help you visit safely and respectfully, in a place of deep living culture.

FOUR THINGS TO KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

01 Climbing Uluru is permanently banned

Banned since October 2019, the climb crossed a sacred men's ceremonial track tied to Tjukurpa. This is a legal prohibition, not a preference, and applies to every client without exception.

02 Respect photography restrictions

Some areas of Uluru cannot be photographed because they depict sacred sites, always follow signage. Never photograph Anangu people without explicit permission.

03 Start at the Cultural Centre

Understanding Tjukurpa first transforms the whole visit. Encourage every client to begin at the Cultural Centre and to choose an Anangu-guided experience.

04 Prepare for extreme heat

Heat is a genuine medical risk, up to 50°C. Walks close above 36°C. The nearest hospital is 450km away. You'll need 1L of water per hour, sun protection, and evacuation cover.

PLEASE TAKE EXTRA CARE

Heat and remoteness. Please note that walks close automatically above 36°C, the nearest hospital is in Alice Springs (450km away), and travel insurance with medical evacuation cover is essential, particularly for those with heat-sensitive conditions.

VISITING ULURU–KATA TJUṬA RESPONSIBLY

ENCOURAGE

- + Use the name Uluru, not Ayers Rock
- + Stay on all marked tracks
- + Check and respect no-photography signs
- + Ask permission before photographing Anangu
- + Carry 1L of water per hour in heat
- + Visit the Cultural Centre first
- + Buy art from Anangu-owned outlets only
- + Observe all park and Sorry Business closures

ADVISE AGAINST

- Climb Uluru or any rock formation
- Photograph or enter restricted sacred sites
- Remove rock, sand, soil or plant material
- Enter the Mutitjulu community
- Walk alone in remote areas
- Attempt walks above 36°C
- Litter anywhere in the park
- Buy souvenirs from non-Anangu outlets

ANANGU CULTURAL RESPECT

Uluru–Kata Tjuṭa is a place of living culture, jointly managed by its Anangu Traditional Owners. We'd encourage you to engage with Tjukurpa through Anangu-guided experiences such as Maruku Arts workshops and SEIT cultural tours.
